REPUBLICAN NOMINATIONS.

For President:
BENJAMIN HARRISON,
OF INDIANA.

For Vice-President:
LEVI P. MORTON,
OF NEW YORK.

General Alger, of Michigan, who has been with Mr. Blaine in Indiana, says: "I believe the Republicans are going to carry every State in the North. In the light of what we all present know, I do not see how the Democrats can carry any one of the doubtful States. Such enthusiasm as we saw in Indiana was amazing."

The Federalist attempt to show a great growth of the free trade or revenue reform idea in the Northwest is thus disposed of by the St. Paul Pioneer Press: "In the desperate battle to overthrow the protective system which has enabled the people of the Northwest to develop their resources in a manner unparalleled in the history of the world, the Democratic party has now thrown down the gage of battle to the farmers of the Northwest. They are told that the farmers of the Northwest will vote their free trade ticket. The farmers of the Northwest will be solidly against free trade, as the farmers of New York or Illinois. The Free Traders well know that they were defeated almost wholly upon the issue created by the protective tariff. Other products, than coal, and the wages of the men employed in discovering, developing and in the mines, and then the wages in correspondingly low of all these products."

Mr. Daniels in New York.

After speaking to an immense audience at Lexington, Kentucky, on Saturday evening, Hon. Daniel Voorhees, candidate for the office of Vice President on the Democratic ticket with Mr. Cleveland, addressed a large audience at Cooper Union, New York, on Monday evening. In spite of an address that filled the huge Union Square to overflowing and also an all-day rain storm, Mr. Daniels succeeded in getting a large audience together to hear him. He was introduced by Judge Noah Davis as a "Democrat and the friend of John Kelly." Mr. Daniels said that he had been invited to address the Democratic meeting in Union Square, and he had come to do so, although he was a stranger to the people of New York. He was glad to see the Democratic host of the Empire State and of the Manhattan Island so well organized with them to do battle for the cause of Democracy. There was no need to explain the issues of the campaign. They were clear and distinct. The Democratic party was pledged to the reduction of the revenue. The Republican party was pledged to the reduction of the surplus. The Democratic party would do so by taking the burdens of the tax off the necessaries of life. The Republican party would do so by taking off the taxes on the luxuries of the rich. The Democratic party would do so by taking off the taxes on the luxuries of the rich. The Democratic party would do so by taking off the taxes on the luxuries of the rich.
